INTRODUCING TRULY MADLY DEEPLY®

truly.

For those who seek true beauty, inspiration lies here. Fulfillment is stored in a bottle, cut with the clean lines and easy elegance of all great art. A pure fragrance is born.

In a world which rushes by, catching twigs and leaves in its current and calling them original, Stephen Burlingham searches for the flecks of pure gold beneath the surface. In an age that too often accepts the mediocre, he seeks to create the deeply beautiful.

Himself the culmination of an ancestry rich with thinkers, Stephen Burlingham emerges to lift open a window on another era. He brings us a trilogy of rare and striking fragrances, the first of which is available at Barney, Neiman Marcus, and Takashimaya New York. Each fragrance is perfect in its own right, and each is seductively novel. Hand blown and colored glass, sterling silver caps, and exclusive crocodile skin cases all make the consideration and passion invested in his work obvious. We are treated to a lush sensory experience both tactile and aromatic.

The bottle's gentle curves are smoothly cut, resulting in a faceted sculpture reminiscent of a gemstone. The fresh, dewy scent of the first fragrance, truly, envelopes one in a luxurious fantasy of delicate jade hue. Each bottle is signed by Stephen, reminding us of the unique care he shows his work. Through his art, we gaze into a time of precious heirlooms and cultivated sophistication. Graceful gowns, hair swept upward towards a dramatic heaven, and eyes that glimmer with a ripe passion for discovery of the self.

His grandmother left a domestic life to explore her psyche under the guidance of Sigmund Freud. She stayed with his family, later becoming an analyst herself. His great grandfather, Louis Comfort Tiffany, continued to change and inspire the fashionable world as his father, Charles Lewis Tiffany, the founder of Tiffany and Co., had done before him.

One man's vision began a revolution in classic style, and Stephen Burlingham upholds the tradition. Like the men who made Tiffany's, he pursues only the purest art; art that will draw and keep the world's attention. As riveting as the exquisite diamond in the simple six-prong setting, Stephen Burlingham's creation captures our desire. Each bottle is a work of fine craftsmanship and unyielding standards. We fall in love at first sight.
